samed in this way to the purenase of arms and military accountements, or using for the purpose the credit which such an amount of property would have given, the War Department would have been able to equip troops as fast as they could be assembled and organised. And, as the Southern people were full of enthusiasm, five hundred thousand men could have been ready and a the field had such a course been pursued at the the 21st of July, 1881. Such a force placed on the morthern borders of the Confederacy, before the United States had brought a fourth of the num-ber into the field, would probably have prevented the very idea of "coercion." Such a disposition of such an army, and the possession of financial cans of carrying on war for years would have cured the success of the Confederacy.

The timely adoption of such a financial system ould have secured to us the means of success, even without an extraordinary importation of arms and the immediate organization of large almost worthless, when a soldler's month's pay would scarcely buy one meal for his family—and that was the case in all the last period of ten or twerie months—those soldiers of the laboring class who had families were compelled to choose between their military service and the strongest obligations men know—their duties to wives and dren. They obeyed the strongest of thos bligations, left the army, and returned to their names to support their families.

that our armies were so reduced in the last months of the war.

As to the charge of want of loyalty or seal in the war, I assert, from as much opportunity for observation as any individual had, that no people ever displayed so much under such circumstances, and with so little flagging for so long a time continuously.

An error in relation to the state of preparation for war of each of the two sections of the country in the beginning of 1861 has prevailed in the North since then. I refer to the belief that when the Southern Confederacy was formed the arms that had been provided by the Government of the state of preparation of the country that the section of the country is the way that you are in the cistern. By this time the old lady had recovered sufficiently to recume her hysterical screaming again, and commenced yelling at a greater rate than had been provided by the Government of the imposed upon the members of the order are prop-erly observed. He begins his jeamey of visitation at St. Alphonsus Roman Catholic church, of this city, which is considered the central seat of the Order. The General, as he is termed, of the Re-demptorists congregation is Nicholas Manson, who has his permanent residence at Rome, and sent to the Provincial Heads of the different countries in which this Order is situated, to be by ciently to resume her hysterical screaming again, and commenced yelling at a greater rate than congregations. Father. Manusca was elected ever, just as the man who went down into the bad been provided by the Government of the United States for the common defence were in the possession of the secondal States.

This belief was produced by the most malignant and industricusty circulated slauders by which the reputation of any public man in the United States aver suffered—the accusation against John B-Floyd, of Virginia, that while Secretary of War he had all the public arms removed from their rest at such an untimely hour of the Mar he had all the public arms removed from might. They had one consolation, however—Tiger was as dead a dog as ever breathless lay.

North and arm the South for the impending war. This accusation was so extensively circulated as a superposition for life. The Provincial Head of the Redemptorist Congregation is elected every third taken time to dress, and their hoddes were cold and their indignation was warm when they learned by the order of the Order in the Order has been consecutively elected for three bornes. A general convention of Rome by Victor Emanuel frustrated the object, and there will be no convention held, as object, and there will be no convention belonging of fits General, "until the order was so extensively circulated as
